三、克漏字測驗【請依照段落上下文意，選出最適當的答案】

It's speculated that 70 percent of the jobs at Japan's hotels will be automated in the next five years. For hotel owners, it takes about a year or two to get their money back on robot 41. But since robots can work 24 hours a day, and they don't need vacations, eventually it's more cost- 42. One latest research estimates that 54 percent of the tasks workers perform in American restaurants and hotels could be automated using currently available technologies—making 43 the fourth-most-automatable sector. Ostensibly, 44 worrying. In fact, the food-service and accommodation sector now employs 13.7 million Americans, up 38 percent since 2000, 45 more jobs than manufacturing. Like it or not, now robots have arrived in restaurants and hotels for the same reasons they first arrived on factory floors.

四、閱讀測驗【請在下列各題中選出最適當的答案】

Contemporary scholars agree that "race" was essentially a folk idea, not a product of scientific research and discovery. Since the 1940s when Ashley Montagu argued against the use of the term "race" in science, a growing number of scholars in many disciplines have declared that the real meaning of race has to do with social realities, quite distinct from physical variations in the human species.

Race and its ideology about human differences arose out of the context of African slavery. But many peoples throughout history have been enslaved without the imposition of racial ideology. The first people that the English tried to enslave and place on plantations were the Irish with whom they had had hostile relations since the 13th century. In the later part of the 17th century the demand for labor grew enormously. It had become clear that Irishmen did not make good slaves. More than that, the real threats to social order were the poor freed whites who demanded lands and privileges that the upper class colonial governments refused. Some colonial leaders turned to African labor for a buffer against the masses of poor whites.

Until the 18th century the image of Africans was generally positive. But in order for the colonists to transform African Americans into their property, they minimized those qualities that make their slaves human. The rise of a powerful antislavery movement both in Europe and in the United States posed threats. As a consequence, proslavery forces found it necessary to develop new arguments for defending the institution. Focusing on physical differences, they turned to the notion of the natural inferiority of Africans and thus their God-given suitability for slavery. Such arguments became more frequent and strident from the end of the 18th century on, and the characterizations of Africans became more negative. It was not until 1857 when U.S. Chief Justice Roger Taney legitimized slavery only for Africans and their descendants that the concept of race was codified in laws.

Today anthropologists claim that "race" has no intrinsic relationship to human biological diversity and "race" is a social invention. The race concept beginning in the 18th century became a problematic worldview, a set of culturally created attitudes and beliefs about human group differences.

- 【1】46. What is the passage mainly about?
① The evolution of a human concept.
② The scientific foundation of a research.
③ The codification procedures of slavery.
④ The contributions of modern anthropology.
- 【2】47. According to the passage, what is true about the term "race"?
① It was discovered by scientists in 18th century.
② It was made up for the interests of a small group.
③ It has resulted from the study of human physical differences.
④ It was established in the British colonial period to minimize slavery.
- 【2】48. According to the passage, which of the following is true about poor Irishmen in the 13th-17th century?
① They traded African laborers.
② They labored in the farm for the English.
③ They gained social power through revolutions.
④ Then enjoyed privileges granted by colonial leaders.
- 【4】49. What does the word "institution" refer to in paragraph 3?
① Property.
② Movement.
③ Colonization.
④ Slavery.
- 【1】50. What can be inferred from the passage?
① Africans as a group have been negatively influenced by the idea of "race."
② Proslavery forces may develop new arguments to defend themselves.
③ Future anthropological studies may focus on bio-diversity.
④ Roger Taney was an African descendant.
