五、閱讀測驗【請在下列各題中選出最適當的答案】

Studies show that violence on television has an adverse effect on children and the way they think and act. We know that for the most part, children learn from both experience and social learning or role modeling. Therefore, when children, especially young children, see violence on television, it is difficult for them to differentiate between what is real or what is make believe, and children tend to emulate or copy what they are seeing. Furthermore, there is a chemical change in the brain, similar to that which is seen in post-traumatic stress disorder; if enough violence is viewed, the brain reacts as if the person doing the viewing has actually been abused. This is especially true if the violence is one sided, as in the case of violence on TV. Now add to this the fact that children who watch violence on television have brains that are still developing, and you can see how really dangerous TV viewing can be.

We know, for instance, that children are psychologically affected by having less empathy, a characteristic we see in bullies; that they are more likely to use aggressive strategies to solve their problems rather than to search for more peaceful methods of conflict resolution; that they tend to be more reactive rather than proactive—relying more on knee-jerk reactions to resolve frustrations; and finally, that they appear to be more fearful of social relationships which make them bite before they can be bitten. This perception of danger, when coupled with a lack of empathy, can lead to sadistic behavior. Moreover, children seeing too much violence on TV are more likely to be argumentative, as they have dispensed with the slow caution of inhibitors. These children act out in class and are more likely to be the class bully. Since they seem to be less patient than their counterparts, studies show that children who watch too much violence on TV appear to be more unwilling to cooperate, and delay gratification. Therefore, they seem to demonstrate a strong sense of entitlement.

In addition, there are other potential dangers to violent TV viewing and one of the most disturbing cases is that young children become more violent themselves as teenagers, and tend to have more encounters with the law as adults.

- 【2】 46. What is the purpose of the passage?
① To persuade the readers to disallow children to watch TV.
② To explain how children are affected by too much violence on TV.
③ To argue that patients will never recover if they are abused in childhood.
④ To demonstrates how parents can stop their children from watching too much TV violence.
- 【2】 47. What will happen in children's brain if they see too much violence?
① The cells in the brain may be hurt.
② The chemical in the brain may be changed.
③ The number of neurons in the brain may decrease.
④ The circulation of blood in the brain may be altered.
- 【1】 48. Which of the following is closest in meaning to “sadistic” in the second paragraph?
① Brutal.
② Exciting.
③ Limited.
④ Strange.
- 【4】 49. Which of the following is NOT true about those children that are affected by TV violence?
① They are less patient than those who do not watch TV.
② They are likely to solve problems in aggressive ways.
③ They do not like to work with others to accomplish a task.
④ They do not forget to appreciate others after receiving help.
- 【3】 50. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage about children affected by TV violence?
① They want to be their teachers' assistants to get their attention.
② They hope they can be class leaders so they can ask others to do anything.
③ They have a higher risk of breaking the law when they are grown up.
④ They tend to become victims of violence themselves in their teenage years.
