四、閱讀測驗【請在下列各題中選出最適當的答案】

第一篇：

In Malaysia, Peranakan Chinese or Straits-born Chinese are the descendants of Chinese immigrants who came to the Malay Archipelago between the 15th and 17th centuries. They maintained their culture partially despite their native language gradually disappearing a few generations after settlement.

Members of this community in Malaysia address themselves as “Baba Nyonya.” Nyonya is the term for the women and Baba for the men. Nyonyas and Babas usually do not speak Chinese, or other Chinese dialects. They have a language of their own. In their heyday, the Babas and Nyonyas were wealthy and influential people in the business world. This is evident in their jewelry costumes, shoes and embroidery pieces—items of refined workmanship highly sought after by art and antique collectors. They were usually traders, the middlemen of the British and the Chinese, or the Chinese and Malays. Because of this, they almost always had the ability to speak two or more languages.

The Nyonya dishes are a combination of Chinese and Malay dishes, giving it a distinct flavor of its own. Nyonya cooking is about the blending of spices. Although Peranakan food takes a long time to prepare, traditional Nyonyas are proud of their unique cuisine and spend a better part of their lives in the kitchen to prepare these dishes. The Peranakan food is one of the most popular contributions of the community to modern day Southeast Asians. Many Nyonya restaurants have opened all over Malaysia and Singapore in recent years.

Yet, despite of the adoption of various cultures in their daily life, Baba Nyonyas have clung to their Chinese identity in some aspects. They celebrate festivals like the Moon Festival on a large scale. The older generation continues to observe Chinese religious beliefs and rituals, though many younger Straits-born Chinese eventually convert to Christianity. The intermarriage between Peranakans and other Malaysians and social developments have somewhat resulted in a more dilute Nyonya culture in day-to-day living. However, on special occasions such as Chinese New Year, weddings and birthdays, old tradition is still well maintained. “Old soldiers,” the maxim goes, “never die, they only fade away” and this sentiment would appear applicable to the Baba and Nyonya heritage culture in Malaysia.

- 【2】41. Which of the following is NOT the group focused in the passage?
① Peranakans.            ② Native Malays.        ③ Baba Nyonyas.        ④ Straits-born Chinese.
【4】42. According to the passage, which of the following may be a common job for the group of people discussed?
① Soldiers.                ② Linguists.              ③ Mechanics.            ④ Businessmen.
【2】43. What is true about Nyonya cuisine?
① It's an improved version of fast food.            ② More than one kind of spice is usually used.
③ It's very popular in places outside of Southeast Asia.    ④ Dishes in different Nyonyan restaurants are never the same.
【2】44. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the word “dilute” in the final paragraph?
① Resolved.                ② Lessened.              ③ Increased.              ④ Concentrated.
【1】45. Which of the following is true about modern-day Baba Nyonyas?
① They celebrate Chinese festivals.                ② Intermarriages cause family problems.
③ The older generation believes in Jesus Christ.    ④ Their weddings mostly follow western traditions.

第二篇：

The dictionary defines ageism as the “tendency to regard older persons as debilitated, unworthy of attention, or unsuitable for employment.” But research indicates that ageism may not just be ill-informed or hurtful. It may also be a matter of life and death. Not that it's literally killing people. Researcher Becca Levy, a professor of epidemiology and psychology at the Yale School of Public Health, says it depends on how much a given individual takes those negative ideas to heart. In one study, Levy looked at people's attitudes about aging when they were in late middle age and then followed them over time. Some of these people thought of older people as weak or dependent. Others thought of them as experienced or wise. What she found was that the people who had a positive view of aging lived about 7 and half years longer than the people who saw aging in a negative light.

The above didn't mean that if you think positive thoughts about aging, it's OK to sit on the couch in front of the TV and eat a pound of bacon. But according to Levy's other studies, this mind/body connection counts for a lot. For example, one showed that middle-aged people who had no cognitive impairment but did have negative views of aging were more likely to later develop the brain changes associated with Alzheimer's disease. And the more negative their views, the worse those brain changes were. On the other hand, another study found that people with positive views of older adults were much more likely to recover from major health setbacks.

Having a purpose in life is a robust predictor of how well someone will live and thrive as they age. It's not something a doctor can prescribe as easily as a change in diet. But whether it's doctor's orders or society at large, attitudes do change. And Levy's research suggests that if people don't assume that they'll be useless when they're older, the payoff could be huge.

- 【3】46. According to the article, what can be related to Alzheimer's disease?
① Unworthy of attention.                            ② Unsuitable for employment.
③ Negative views of aging.                        ④ A purpose in life.
【2】47. What does “debilitated” possibly mean in the first paragraph?
① Optimistic.                                        ② Weakened.                                        ③ Intimidated.                                        ④ Motivated.
【1】48. What is the purpose of this article?
① To promote positive thoughts about aging.    ② To explain Becca Levy's research.
③ To have a purpose in life.                        ④ To define the true meaning of ageism.
【4】49. Which of the following statements is NOT included in Levy's research?
① Some people saw older people as dependent.    ② Some people saw older people as experienced or wise.
③ People with positive views of aging lived longer.    ④ People with positive views of aging recovered faster.
【3】50. Based on the content, who are the targeted audience for reading this?
① Professors of epidemiology.                    ② Patients with Alzheimer's disease.
③ Middle-aged people.                              ④ Students of psychology.
